Aundra Island: Changing the Game With Multi-Ethnic-Destruction-In-America

Aundra Island has created a unique sound that is a fusion of rock, rap and jazz for his upcoming album M.E.D.I.A., which stands for multi-ethnic-destruction-in-America. Aundra and his band have written five out of the ten songs for the album he plans to release later this year. This is the first conceptualized album he has written.

“It is a darker album than our previous albums, because I want people to think about the political and ethnic turmoil that is going on in America and other countries right now!”

Aundra’s inspiration is his concern about the youth’s perception of media and how it is being used today. He feels that the youth of today care more about what is going on in social media than world events that can greatly impact their future.

This album will also reflect on the past, present and future of the media’s portrayal of the world around us through the eyes of Aundra. The sound of the album feature heavy base, drums and prolific rhymes about racism, and starvation. The rock, rap and jazz fusion that Aundra is known for is grabbing the attention of music fans all over Southern California.
